5 Skin habits to break

You may be doing damage without even knowing it.

BY TRACY PEREZ

1 Using a scrub too often to clean your face

Exfoliation is a good thing, but gritty face scrubs can cause tiny cuts, broken blood vessels, and chronic irritation if applied a lot. "You can disrupt the skin barrier, so it can't do its job: keeping bad bacteria, virus, and fungus from getting in and preventing water from getting out," says dermatologist Cybele Fishan, M.D. Her suggestion: Limit exfoliation to once a week, and do so with a no-scrub, rinse-off product. We recommend Mary Kay Botanical Effects 3-in-1 Cleanse (P950, marykay.com) and Kiehl's Calendula Deep Cleansing Foaming Face Wash (P159) at Kiehl's stores and kiosks!

Get your true clean

ENJOY THE LUXURY of a power cleanse minus the cost of a high-end brush with this smart investment: The Mary Kay Skininvigorate Cleansing Brush (P2,390, marykay.com.ph) gently massages your face as it thoroughly removes dirt and makeup residue in seconds.

Its two-speed power brush can reach over 400 rotations per minute, but is non-abrasive on your delicate facial skin. Your face doesn't just get a deep clean; the polishing action also helps reveal fresher-looking skin, softens the signs of aging, and tightens pores. You'll never wash your face the same way again.

Best used with a Mary Kay cleanser. Set includes cleansing brush, two brush heads, two AA batteries, and instruction manual
